Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 06 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wintry showers and icy conditions, becoming drier and brighter later.

Today:
Scattered, wintry showers are likely during the morning, especially in eastern areas, leading to icy conditions. These showers will ease during the afternoon, becoming dry and bright of most. Remaining cold despite sunny spells and light winds. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Tonight:
Staying dry through the evening and overnight. Largely clear skies will cause very cold temperatures, bringing a risk of freezing fog patches and icy conditions. Light winds. Minimum temperature -6 deg C (21 deg F).

Thursday:
A bright and frosty start, but with some areas of freezing fog which will be slow to clear. Increasingly cloudy with outbreaks of light rain and snow by the afternoon. Maximum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
A few outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow on Friday, then drier on Saturday. Staying cold both days, with sunny spells and overnight frosts. Cloudy and milder on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.